7. Listen to Jack and Leo. What are they talking about?

Jack: Hey, Leo! What are you doing here?

Leo: I'm waiting for the news. Scientists are reporting the study results at 8.30 p.m.

Jack: What is the study about?

Leo: A group of astronauts. The scientists are preparing them for a trip to the moon.

Jack: I think they want to make sure that their crews return in good health. Because human body is not designed to stay in space over a long period."

Leo: Why? Do long periods in space affect the body?

Jack: Of course. You know more than 70 percent of Earth is covered in water. Our bodies are also about 70 percent water. If there was no water, human wouldn't develop on Earth. So, humans need water, too much water. Then, gravity is really important. If there was no gravity, that water would move up toward the head. Our arms and legs would grow weaker at what is called zero gravity. And maybe the biggest problem is exposure to radiation. On Earth, the atmosphere protects humans. If atmosphere didn't block the harmful radiation, we would have a lot of health problems. But in outer space, there is no such protection.

Leo: You know a lot, Jack. If I were in your shoes, I would study physics.

8. Listen to the conversation again. Are the statements true or false?
